1 Peter 2:9 NKJV

Of Whom Shall I Be Afraid?

Fear. What is fear? What are you afraid of? What scares the life out of you? Who scares the life out of you?

I was half asleep when I suddenly heard a noise in the living room. I immediately thought about the front door. I asked myself, "Did I lock the door?" I came from a prayer meeting that night. Usually, I use the garage door entering our house, but that particular night the garage door was not working so I used the front door. So, after being awakened by the noise in the living room, I questioned if I locked the front door or not – I did.

Why do we lock our doors at night? I'm guessing it's because of fear. Fear of the unknown. I'm fearful that my son might sleepwalk out of the house with the door unlocked (Nate talks when he's asleep. There's no telling if one of these nights he sleepwalks out of the house!), or maybe fear of a home invasion (which is the most likely reason why we lock our doors).

In Psalm 27, David expressed such confidence in God amidst the threat on his life from the pursuing forces of King Saul and his army in the wilderness. David had so much confidence in God that he expressed:

Whom shall I fear?
The Lord is the strength of my life;
Of whom shall I be afraid?” Psalm 27:1 NKJV
